Type of Resource:

You can print this worksheet to be distributed for students to answer to encourage them to feel good about themselves by citing the things they excel at.

The actual courseware/source of this activity is an interactive learning app that promotes the value of EQ and Social and Emotional Learning (SEL) for children aged 7-12 years

How to use this Resource:

This resource is highly recommended if you are a teacher who wants your students to have better EQ and if you want them to develop their social and emotional learning (SEL). Open the topic by citing the importance of feeling good about their own selves, being confident about their own abilities and taking pride in their achievements, how little it may seem. You can then print this worksheet and ask the students to do this mini activity. After answering the question, ask the class to enumerate tips they might have on how they can further boost their self-esteem or help a classmate who is not feeling confident about their own skills.
